Data Sources:

- Topographic data (road/rail centrelines and watercourses) show slight inaccuracies and should not be used at, or scaled to, a smaller scale (eg. 1:50000).
- Railway Centrelines and Watercourses - Dept of Lands, May 2004
- Highways & Major Road Centrelines - Dept of Lands, May 2004; RTA 2003
- Cadastre - Dept of Lands, May 2004
- Committed Urban Uses and Rural-Res. Zones - Local Councils, July 2004
- National Parks and State Forests - Dept of Lands, May 2004
- Farmland data - DIPNR, 4 April 2005

Scale (eg. 1:50000). Grid lines are shown at intervals of 5000 metres (MGA is a Universal Transverse Mercator Projection). Map Grid of Australia (MGA) - Zone 56

Geocentric Datum of Australia 1994 (GDA94)

Consequences of such acts or omissions, any loss, damage or expense, and its employees disclaim liability for any act done or omission made on the information in the map and any notations. Therefore, the State of New South Wales Map produced by DIPNR Grafton Office, 13 April 2005.

*Note: This policy map has been derived from soil landscape data which is accurate to +/- 100 m. The data was produced for use at a scale of 1:100 000 or smaller and should not be used at, or scaled to, a larger scale (eg. 1:50000). Agreed strategies can be seen at council offices. In a settlement strategy is not automatically approved for the North Coast Regional Environmental Plan. Land identified in this strategy can be considered for urban or rural residential rezoning even if it is mapped as significant farmland. The council strategy has to be used for agriculture. However, habitat values are secondary to agricultural values, or that land not suitable for agriculture can be considered for urban or rural residential rezoning. Significant farmland status does not imply that vegetation and no-till farming techniques are used. Significant Non-Contiguous Farmland, Regionally Significant Farmland, and State Significant Farmland are all subject to the conditions of Section 20 and 38 of the Environmental Planning and Assessment Act 1979 (Section 117(2)Direction). The council strategy (published in a draft form by December 2004) under clauses 20 or 38 of the Environmental Planning and Assessment Act 1979 (Section 117(2)Direction) must have been agreed to between December 1994 and December 2004 (or placed on public exhibition by the end of December 2004).