Join your neighbours to help shape the future of Sydney

Hundreds of people across Sydney have already joined the conversation on social media, by posting photos and comments using #MySydney.

People in the Greater Sydney region are getting involved in building a better future for their local community by sharing what they love about their neighbourhoods.

A spokesperson for the Department of Planning and Environment said it only takes a few minutes to share ideas for the future of Sydney’s neighbourhoods.

“Local people are using Instagram and Facebook every day. Now, they can use social media to help make a difference to their local community,” a spokesperson for the Department of Planning and Environment said.

“It’s really easy – just take a photo of your favourite spot and post it using #MySydney or visit our interactive website to post a comment.”

The feedback will be compiled and used to help shape localised plans known as District Plans.

Each suburb of Sydney falls into one of six District Plans, tailored to the needs of the region: West, West Central, North, Central, South and South West.

“This is a great way to join the conversation about the future of our local area and the next step in implementing A Plan for Growing Sydney – the NSW Government’s broad vision for the city’s future.”

People can contribute until Friday 31 July. More information can be found at http://www.planning.nsw.gov.au/MySydney.
