SKY’S NOW THE LIMIT FOR PARRAMATTA BUILDING

The landmark Aspire Tower development in Parramatta is another step closer after the NSW Government approved building height limits being removed for the site.

The decision follows a request from Parramatta City Council, and will support the creation of the new tower which is expected to reach 306m in height and contain up to 90 storeys.

Planning Minister Rob Stokes said the decision will help make the Aspire Tower a reality.

“It will herald the creation of a modern architectural skyline, defining Parramatta’s role as Western Sydney’s capital,” Mr Stokes said.

The decision removes building height limits for the site of the proposed Aspire Tower at 160-182 Church Street, Parramatta.
